Abundant Achievements

Walker, who was born in Scotland in 1892 and passed away in 1952, fought in the First World War. He moved to Hong Kong in 1934 and worked as the manager and chief engineer of the Kowloon and Canton Railway (British Section). Walker Road, in Hung Hom, was named after him. He served in the Hong Kong Volunteer Defence Corps in his spare time and was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel of the Field Company Engineers in 1940. During the Battle for Hong Kong in 1941, he defended Wong Nai Chung Gap with 70 engineers in his unit. He was wounded during the battle, but luckily, he was rescued by his comrades. The British Government awarded 11 medals of honour and commemorative medals to Walker at different times, in recognition of his various contributions.
